GUATEMALA ROBUSTA FINCA EL SIGLO

Guatemala's most Western department is San Marcos which is dominated in the North by the two highest volcanos in Central America and reaches all the way down South along the border to Mexico to the Pacific Ocean. Right in the center of San Marcos lies the municipio of El Tumbador where inhabitants are mostly of the Mam indigenous people. Their main source of income still is from agriculture. Situated along the lower slopes of the mountainous volcanic North El Tumbador

Founded more than 90 years ago and still owned by the 4th generation of the Castañeda Toca family, Finca El Siglo y Anexos is one of the largest state farms in El Tumbador. They have their own processing facilities from washing stations to the dry mill - the containers are packed right at the farm. Finca El Siglo produces Catimor and Robusta varieties due to its lower altitude. Besides coffee they also produce macadamia nuts and natural rubber.

Being a large employer in the region the Castañeda family has implemented sustainability programs for their farms as well as their pickers and permanent employees such as schools, health support and best agricultural practices.
